EDITORIAL

At last — a real step forward toward the much talked-about and hoped for cooperation between UFO investigative organizations? Maybe. At any rate, a step toward that. An extra day was added to the MUFON Symposium in Toronto (July 1982) at which representatives of a surprisingly varied number of UFO organizations gathered to discuss their own work, to advocate greater cooperation between groups and to consider forming an overall organization or loose federation of organizations.

Walt Andrus led the brain-storming session that followed with good-humored determination to achieve something, by way of a discussion of goals for such coalition and some ways of achieving them. By the end of the day a volunteer steering committee had come into existence and had nominated John Schuessler of Texas (and MUFON) as chairman. Other members are: Pete Mazzola of SBI (New York based), Rick Hilberg of NOUFOG and Charles Wilhelm of OUFOIL (Ohio groups) Walt Andrus as well as Henry McKay (the only Canadian) of MUFON, Tedra Wallen of PRO-UFO (working with Dr. Leo Sprinkle in Wyoming) and Mimi Hynek of CUFOS. (Bill Moore of APRO was there only as an observer.)

One inspiration for this had come from Bertil Kuhlemann of Sweden, who had urged U.S. groups to get together in order to take part in International meetings and to help in standardizing investigative techniques and computer approaches. Pete Mazzola had urged this months ago, and Barbara Schutte of Iowa had even developed a framework for such a group and circulated it around the country. What develops next may be different than any of those ideas, but at least the committee is under way and planning to get together in September for the next planning session.

We feel that our readers prefer reading about a few cases in greater detail than about a host of cases, each treated in a summary, condensed manner. Accordingly, in this and future issues of IUR, we will give preference to well investigated cases, presented in enough detail so that these become a matter "for the record" and will constitute eventually a body of information of value to the truly interested reader and, of course, to that growing body of scientists, both physical and social, who are taking an increasing interest in the fact that the UFO Phenomenon just can't be dismissed as a fad, gross misidentifications, and hoaxes.

It is important also to relate any given case to others of its class. UFO events are not just isolated events, bearing no relation to others. In this issue we present a triad of very similar cases; indeed, all three having their point of origin within a fifth of a mile or so of each other. Witnesses to these events, however, were virtual strangers to each other.

Cases involving hypnotic regression obviously require care in their presentation which again means that they cannot be presented in just a few paragraphs. Our "cover story" is one of these, and we offer no excuses for presenting the work of Mr. Sigismond on this case, nor that of Dr. Schellhase on the former three, even though they do comprise the main body of this issue. We feel our readers want not only well presented investigations, but later follow-ups as well. Please let us hear from you on these matters. The International UFO Reporter is meant, after all, for you, the reader.

LETTERS

Editor:

I would like to praise Dr. Hynek's editorial in the July/August 1982 issue concerning "A Qualifying Exam For UFO Skeptics." It is a fact that in every discussion one gets into over this subject there is always the uninformed who are so pontifical and invariably want to "debunk" everything with absolutely no scholarly approach. Dr. Hynek's editorial will give many of us a little guideline to use and to set some of these people back on their haunches, so to speak.

E. T. Kendrick
Phoenix, Arizona

Dr. Hynek:

...Recently, reading of the strange sights described in your letters, I decided that I must let you know about (mine).

It must have been around 1975, at the time of the last moon launch from Canaveral before this recent one. I asked my cousin to accompany me to a raised knoll (near Macon, Georgia) to watch. Just as darkness began to ascend...we both shouted "What is that?" and pointed to a spot directly over one of the tallest buildings in the downtown area. "It looks like a piece of Reynolds Wrap!"

There was a huge thing, like a piece of silver foil undulating in the air above Macon. It was as though some unseen hands were shaking out a rug. Up and down went the ends, moving sometimes upward, sometimes dropping down. But it seemed to stay in about the same position relative to the building.

When it waved upward, a tiny bit of light from the sinking sun hit it and made the top of it sparkle, while the bottom remained in twilight. Then, as it descended, only the twilight hit it and it had a dull shine like a piece of tin foil moving up and down in semi-dusk. We watched it for almost five minutes. After awhile it slowed down its gyrations, and just disappeared.

Both of us had seen the run of the mill UFOs...she twice and I four times...night lights, twinkling red balls, orange discs...but this was out of the ordinary. I hope someone reading this will have had the same experience and will let you know about it.

Editor:

Have you seen the article "Phenomena, comment and notes" which appeared in the August 1982 issue of SMITHSONIAN magazine? Neat stuff!

Bob Morrison
Sarasota, Florida

(Editor's Note: The article is, indeed, "neat stuff." We quote from it briefly with thanks to the SMITHSONIAN and writer John P. Wiley, Jr.)

"...38 men and women spent a rainy weekend at the University of Maryland for the first meeting of the Society for Scientific Exploration." The organizer and first president is Peter Sturrock, an astrophysicist and director of the Institute for Plasma Research at Stanford University..."

"To study something scientifically, you have to know what that means, and Henry Bauer, dean of arts and sciences at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, opened the meeting by pointing out that few people can agree on a definition. 'Scientific' cannot mean controlled experimentation in astronomy or even field biology..."

"Even if we do cobble up a general definition of scientific method, Bauer went on, that is not what scientists actually do. Any such definition would include ideas like careful, cautious, repetitive, but the scientists we admire most are those who are creative, daring, surprising and elegant.

"The scientific method really comes into play only as the whole institution absorbs the discovery of the individual scientist, he suggested. The communal judging and testing of the individual's work leads to the science that is independent of the scientist's style. It is just this communal aspect that the new society (for Scientific Exploration) will offer. Members will investigate areas in which the facts themselves are in dispute, but they will bring established techniques and theories to bear, employing the virtues that helped turn earlier protosciences like astrology and alchemy into the sciences of astronomy and chemistry."

Dear Sirs:

I was pleasantly surprised to see the hypothesis we suggested for the Pring photograph so conclusively confirmed in the tests performed by Dr. Hynek and Mark Rodeghier. As to the question of which of us should get the crocheted UFO, I submit Marc Schumaker (note correct spelling) should get it, as he suggested a mercury vapor light as the cause. After working out the possible geometry of the photo, I called Dr. Hynek and suggested they search for mercury vapor lights when they investigate in Indiana.

A Unique Triad of CE-I Sightings

We have here two highly interesting CE-I UFO events, which, with the Tammy Utt case (IUR, May/June, 1982), describe a unique situation: three Close Encounters occurring at essentially the same spot, at roughly the same time of night, and within a period of two months. Each has been described by the witnesses as significantly different from the others yet none fit remotely the description of conventional aircraft, (the local air base and airport furthermore, disclaimed any knowledge of conventional aircraft in the area at the time).

The original investigations and follow-ups were made by Dr. Kenneth Schellhase, of the University of Northern Michigan, and the following article, although edited because of severe space limitations, is due entirely to him. Mrs. Hynek and I, at a later date, also interviewed the witnesses of these two events, on location, and we agree totally with Dr. Schellhase's evaluation of the witnesses as normal, healthy young people whose manner was open and frank and gave no suggestion of contrivance or hoax. The statements they made to us agree closely with those made to Dr. Schellhase during his more detailed investigation.

Because of the close linkage of these two cases with the Utt case, we include the "box score" description of all three:

The discovery of patterns in events and phenomena is one of the basic objectives and procedures of science, and it must be the same in Ufology if we are to transform it into a science. Often a single UFO story in which its relation to other accounts of similar events is lacking is just that, a "good UFO story." However, when such reports are recognized as instances of a whole class, or when times and places or other individual items are further found related, then we have a phenomenon that should certainly capture the attention of the true scientist who is "curious and eager to find out."

We have in this unique situation three CE-I events in which a highly luminous UFO chases or followed (accompanied might be the best term) the witnesses in their cars late at night, in all cases within the period 11:30 P.M. to 2 A.M., and was sighted initially by all witnesses within 1/5 mile of the same spot (the intersection of two minor country roads). In addition, all witnesses (other than later corroborative witnesses) were teen agers only vaguely known to each other through school friends, neighbors and co-workers of their parents. All three events happened within a two month wintery period.

The manner in which these three CE-I's came to our attention is of definite interest. The Utt case, as stated earlier, gained some notoriety in the local press, and I learned of it that way. The Miron report, however, emerged only because both he and Utt were invited to the same party, thrown within six days of his experience (which definitely did not get any media attention). At this party Tammy Utt was relating her experience "for the thousandth time" to the other teenagers; from most of them she was "taking gas" (friendly ridicule). In the midst of the noise and laughter Tim Miron beckoned to Tammy and mouthed "I want to talk to you." In private, Tim told Tammy of his encounter and she, in turn, told her mother who then later phoned me, knowing of me only because I had interviewed her daughter a short time before.

As for the Parrotta/Hanson case, I learned of it in a most roundabout way, once again illustrating how many UFO events may so easily escape investigative attention, many being discovered only by merest chance. I received a call from a woman from Bark River (some 12 miles west of Escanaba) who did not identify herself but repeatedly questioned me before saying anything else, asking "Are you with the Air Force?" and again and again trying to make sure that "you aren't with the Air Force, are you?" It apparently was worth it to her to spend about five dollars for long distance time to satisfy herself that I was indeed not an Air Force secret agent! After I had finally gained her confidence, she expressed her original fear that I would think her "nuts" and put her name down in "some kind of files."

I visited her later in the week, only to be disappointed; her report turned out to be no more than the all too familiar Nocturnal Lights, and none too good at that, since several could almost certainly be attributed to positively identified jets, probably from the nearby K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base, although inquiry to that Base returned a stout denial that they had had any jets up that night!

After this brief, fruitless interview I had already gotten into my car, ready to depart, when my interviewee casually mentioned that some of her neighbors had also seen UFOs, including two girls who had recently been chased by one. And thus one part of this interesting trilogy narrowly escaped oblivion. It leads me to wonder how many similar instances have never come to light!

The Tim Miron Story

Tim Miron, age 18, partner with his father and brother in a very prosperous dairy farm (see photo) was driving back from his girlfriend's house at about 2 A.M. when the encounter occurred. Going directly north on County Road 533 (reference to the accompanying map is essential to best get the sense, and appreciation of, all these three cases), he was approaching the intersection with C-414 some 150 yards ahead when he first saw the UFO. Appearing at first only like an orange-reddish star-like object less than 20 degrees above a distant tree line, he assumed that it was just that. (the star Capella was in that part of the sky, but to ascribe the rest of Tim's account to Capella would imply that the witness was totally demented).

Tim watched light, now described as definitely larger than a star, as he drove the 1/5 mile to make a right turn going east on 414. The light now appeared directly to his left as he drove the one mile to C-416. Now, going north on this road, Tim reported that the light was flashing red ray-like extensions all around it but mostly on the underside. It appeared directly on his left or a little ahead, but to the left of the windshield post (thus ruling out Capella incidentally).

A little less than a mile from his home, with wide fields all around him, Tim's NL became a CE-I. Still on his left, it now appeared the size of a penny at 12 inches. Tim said, "It was waiting there for me." It was flatter now in appearance, spread out and no longer a star-like ball but more like a cone, but with a piece cut out of one side "like a cookie that someone had taken a bite out of" (see sketch drawn Tim). It also had an arc of small red dots, or lights, which flicked on and off in alternating sequence, with accompanying shorter and longer extensions of the flashing rays, but with the bottom ones twice as long as the others.

Having stopped to note these details, Tim now moved slowly on, and so did the UFO. Suddenly, however, it backed away and descended behind a dense stand of trees about 200 yards from the road and was completely gone. "It looked like it was trying to hide, or something" Tim stated. [Compare Utt: "I thought I scared it" when her UFO suddenly descended behind a stand of trees.]

Then, when Tim was only a half-mile from home, he saw it "biggest and clearest," about the size of a penny ten or so inches away. It was still on the left side but about 150 yards ahead. It hovered over a small yard and partly over a neighbor's house and barn. As Tim drove closer, the object now moved a few hundred feet north, hovering over some tin work-buildings.

The rays were now very long and very red, and much brighter than the object itself (see drawing); the long rays on the bottom were vertical and parallel and did not touch the object, there remaining a gap, but the shorter ones, those on the top and sides, did touch the object and were not as symmetrical as the lower ones.

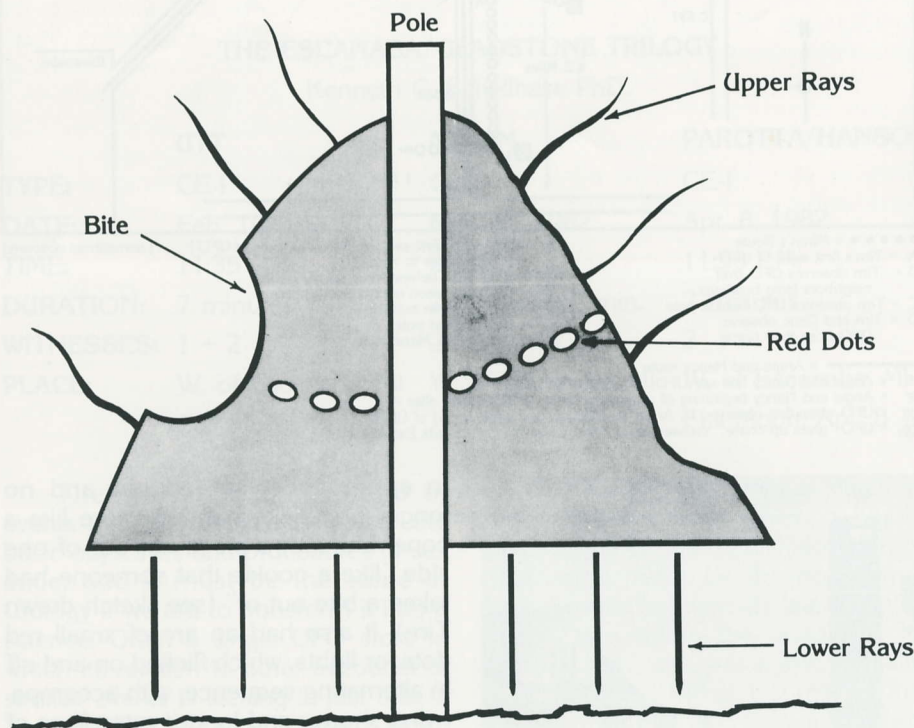

Driving on slowly up to, and then a few feet past, these buildings, Tim had an even closer view of the object; it was now behind a telephone pole (see drawing) 125 feet from the road and directly to his left. It is difficult to tell just how far behind the pole the object was. The tin building over which it hovered is 75 feet behind the pole but offset slightly to the south of the pole; the backdrop of trees is about 500 feet from the pole. Tim estimates that the object hovered about ten feet off the ground but he had difficulty in dealing with my questions about apparent and real size, having already said that the object appeared "biggest and clearest" when over the barn and the house. He appears to have been too awestruck, too moved in a curiously intimate manner, to be able to recall such details! He didn't seem to respond or really care just how precisely nearer or farther to move the penny from his eyes! I imagined myself interrogating a mystic on exactly how high the edifices in Nirvana were or as to how many folds there were in an angel's robe!

Tim's own words serve to illustrate his bewilderment: "it kind of blew up," and, "it was like the moon sitting on the ground" [the moon was not in the sky at that time], "very outstanding," and "it wanted me to recognize it was there." Tim added that he felt the UFO knew that his was the only car on the road. This finally frightened him and he sped homeward, now just 2/5 of a mile away. He knew he had to awaken his mother to obtain corroboration.

When Tim jumped out of his car and headed for his front door, he glanced over his shoulder to see, to his dismay, that the UFO was moving toward him. He dashed inside, woke his mother, and the two of them watched the object for the next 30 to 45 minutes out of the windows and doors of three sides of the house as the object moved over a considerable area, over, around, and between the group of giant silos, the barn and sheds (see detail sketch, Miron farm).

The UFO wandered around these structures many times seemingly with no apparent purpose. Sometimes it went down behind a stand of trees about 100 feet to the north, from behind which it eventually did not re-emerge. That's the last they saw of it. Both mother and son observed this last stage of the event. Mrs. Miron was surprisingly matter-of-fact about the matter, admitting only to the object's being about as large as a grapefruit at arm's length when at its closest, and that it was orange in color. Like her whole family, she was forthright, and friendly, but very obviously a very busy, industrious farm wife with her priorities firmly in mind. It was haying time and this was obviously more important to her than some UFO which apparently did not fit into her scheme of things to worry about!

Taken by itself, this incident, while absorbing enough, is disappointingly unproductive in advancing our understanding of the UFO phenomenon. Taken together with the other two cases, however, (and with other CE-I's recently described in this publication and elsewhere) it delineates a pattern of behavior which certainly suggests that something very real and provocative is going on, something which cannot, in its totality, be ascribed merely to imaginative misidentifications. It should certainly command the attention of anyone curious about the nature of the world about them!

The Parrotta/Hanson Encounter

Teen-agers again (part of a pattern?), this time two eighteen-year old young ladies, Angie Parrotta and Nancy Hanson, who live with their parents in the Bark River area, west of Escanaba. The former is a Freshman in Junior College and the latter a High School senior. On the night of April 8 the two were driving from Escanaba (where they had had a hamburger) and were engaged in the typical teen-age activity of hunting down a party at a friend's house. Just before midnight Nancy, the driver, made the left turn, heading south, as dictated by 414, and started down the 1/5 mile span where 414 joins 533. (Note that Tammy Utt had first spotted her UFO immediately upon making the same turn.) It was now that Angie Parrotta, the passenger, noticed an unusually bright star to the southwest. (Note: There was no bright star or planet in the southwest at that time).

Nancy saw it too and began joking about it perhaps being a UFO, apparently intending humorously to frighten Angie. Nancy now slowed down to about 5 mph for a better look. The bright "star" now became two huge yellowish-white "headlights" attached to something. (Note that at this exact place two months earlier, and at about the same time of night, Tammy Utt had described her first glimpse of the UFO as two very bright lights, "like headlights in the sky." Nancy, however, recalls three huge headlights (see their drawings) and both stick to their respective versions even though they observed it for several minutes later and at closer range. The lights appeared to hover but neither girl saw any blinking red lights.

Ten to twenty seconds after they negotiated the turn southward, suddenly the object moved swiftly toward them. Angie's view, out of the right (west) window was perfect for watching the object as it descended out of the southwest. Nancy recalls her "Oh my God! It's coming down! It's coming down!" As the object approached, Nancy, too, could look right up at it, though on an oblique angle out of the windshield to her right. She remembers how fear overtook her when she realized that there were no other cars on the road and that the few houses in the vicinity were all dark. (There are only 24 houses in all along the 4.2 mile road, and these occur in two clusters.)

Angie shouted, "Go!" and Nancy floored the accelerator; both girls began crying and screaming. The UFO speeded up with them, remaining on their right but just enough ahead of them so that it could "cut them off" at any time. Its height above the road continued at 30-40 feet...the height of the trees which line both sides of the road for all but the last mile. At this time both girls saw a blinking red light on the craft. Angie feared capture and demanded that Nancy drive faster, but Nancy screamed back at her that it was as fast as she could go. Both girls recall at one moment that the speedometer could not go past 40 and, at another moment, 60 seemed the maximum speed attainable. They felt no dragging sensation, however.

Clearly the girls were now in no condition for scientific observation of the event(!) and the traumatic nature of their experience must be kept in mind in assessing their estimates of times and distances. They were quite certain, however, that when they were just one or two minutes north of Highway US 2, the object abandoned its position on the right and appeared suddenly on their left. Then the girls saw it move swiftly toward Escanaba, to the east, and quickly lost sight of it because of obstructed vision.

Throughout, there was complete absence of detectable sound, a condition which obtained in the other two cases as well (and in many other CE-I cases like this).

The two young ladies then drove quickly to Nancy's house to review their experience and to calm down. They called the airport to check on aircraft: none. They had hoped it would turn out to be something mundane and understandable. As they talked, they were unable to agree on the number of bright lights nor on the duration of their experience: Angie at first thought two or three minutes, Nancy held out for ten to fifteen! One week later, in the daylight(!), they retraced their journey and decided on six to seven minutes.

Both agree that the craft resembled a boomerang, or V-shape in form, but curved in the rear. Their drawings do not agree, but in view of the traumatic nature of the event it would be most unusual if they did! Both agree that the object was tremendously large: Nancy... "as big as two houses"; Angie... "so large I'd have to stick the penny (used for apparent size comparison) right up to my eye to cover it." Both agree the bright lights were huge: each the size of a helicopter if it were at the assumed distance of the UFO. Both girls were impressed at the absence of sound.

Nancy vividly recalls the object's silver-metallic skin reflecting the lights of the object. Angie, on the other hand, thought the object was dark brown, with even darker brown squares "of a different texture...like tinted glass, "like windows around a curve."

(Ed note: Psychologists who have had experience with descriptions of traumatic events would not be in the least surprised at even such glaring discrepancies; indeed, they would regard the matter suspect if under such circumstances the drawings agreed in detail).

After virtually completing my investigations, I sent each of the girls a copy of the INTERNATIONAL UFO REPORTER containing the Utt story; they had not been familiar with the details previously.

At the end of June, Dr. and Mrs. Hynek came to Marquette for a visit and took the opportunity of meeting and talking with all the witnesses in these cases save Nancy, who was away with relatives for the summer. They were in full agreement with me that this group of witnesses, although all teen-agers, were quite normal, intelligent and hard-working, and in addition, were pleasant, modest, and radiated an ingenuous sincerity. Nothing we learned about them has led us to doubt the basic reality of their experiences.

Ed note: Now as to the experiences themselves: Confirmed skeptics will of course attempt to transform these experiences into mere hysterical reactions to the sighting of a conventional aircraft. In so doing they must first summarily dismiss the hundreds of similar cases from many parts of the world as reported by a very wide variety of witnesses, and must, therefore, ascribe virtual imbecility to the aggregate of witnesses. With respect to these three cases in particular, they must overlook, first, the unlikelihood of a low flying conventional aircraft in this rural area in the middle of the night; the negative response to inquiries made to airports and military bases about the presence of aircraft in the vicinity, and above all, the total lack of resemblance to conventional aircraft of the appearance and maneuvers and soundlessness of the reported UFOs. Particularly telling is the highly localized nature of their appearance, appearing for many minutes in one locality, disappearing rapidly, and the characteristic absence of reports from adjacent localities of these very craft which made their presence so dramatically, and frighteningly, known in the relatively narrow confines of a portion of the Escanaba/Gladstone area of northern Michigan. CE-IIIs: New Dimensions In Investigations

Richard Sigismond

TYPE: CE III
DATE: November 19, 1980
TIME: 11:45 P.M.
DURATION: 60 Minutes
WITNESSES: 2
PLACE: 24 Miles North of Denver, Colorado

Names of witnesses have been changed to protect identity; names are on file.

During a recent conversation with Dr. J. Allen Hynek, the topic of discussion moved to the subject of close encounter cases and the hidden problems frequently associated with any attempt to conduct a thorough investigation. We recalled the many times we have been approached by newly turned-on discoverers of the UFO subject eager to do investigative work but with no idea of the time, effort, frustrations (and, frequently, expense) required to resolve the more complex cases. As we have seen over the years, these close encounter events are characteristically fraught with varying degrees of trauma and are frequently layered with a perplexing stratum of amnesia. They may consistently be expected to be as frustrating and time consuming in their unravelling as they are provocative in the data which they yield.

We frequently find that witnesses are impelled on the one hand by a strong desire to both explore and communicate the event and on the other by a sometimes quite totally subconscious but equally strong compulsion to keep the entire episode buried, lest investigation of the event bring forth information and reactions which they fear they may be unable to handle.

This ambivalence can create a real dilemma for both investigator and witness.

The investigation of Close Encounters of the Third Kind presents very special problems and calls for qualities and abilities in an investigator not generally called into play in the less complex UFO sightings. Mr. Sigismond, a social psychologist of many years experience, possesses these special qualities to a high degree. His report on the CE-III presented here is based entirely on his own work with the primary witness, including the regressive hypnosis, in which technique he has an expertise developed over many years. The reader will come to appreciate, especially if he reads this report with care, the complexity of the CE-III case when it involves communication and abduction, and the delicacy of approach by the investigator that is required. Here the investigator must be as much a counselor as an investigator; he is dealing with persons who have had what has been to them an extremely real and generally traumatic experience. They are very often extremely puzzled, and remain so, often with profound effects on their personal lives. Mr. Sigismond's article should prove deeply instructive to all serious ufologists, even though, as will be seen, his investigation ended in frustration. This is, indeed, all too often an integral part of the UFO phenomenon as we experience it today.

Editor

The following case illustrates such a situation and hopefully may dispell any notion that serious investigation of the more interesting UFO cases can be conducted by merely spending an hour's time filling in the blanks on pre-printed pages of ready-made UFO questionnaires.

In early December of 1980 I received a call from a man who informed me that he had been given my name after inquiring of a number of persons in the Denver, Colorado area as to whom he might contact to discuss a very unusual event. He felt the event might be UFO related, but if not, was in any case quite distinctly out of the ordinary. My caller set an appointment time for a few days hence and proceeded upon his arrival to tell of a very strange encounter a few days before Thanksgiving of that year with an intense beam of blue light which appeared suddenly while he and his wife were driving home at night to Longmont, Colorado (a small city some twenty seven miles northwest of Denver). This strange light had "locked onto his car" accompanied by a loud sound described as being like the "whish" "whish" of a bull whip but very much louder. The time was 11:45 p.m. The sound was indicated as being louder than a helicopter and as loud as being near a jet airliner when it is taking off!

The couple then noticed the lights of their car beginning to dim while the radio began emitting static before fading out. This radio and electrical interference, as we have so often observed, is reported in many cases throughout the world at certain times when cars are reported to be in close proximity to UFOs. In this case no UFO was seen, however, neither the husband nor wife had time to open the car windows to look up—it was a cold winter night and the windows were closed—before the next event immediately engaged their total attention. For at this time they felt the rear wheels of their station-wagon leave the pavement as the car began lifting up into the night air at a distinct angle. And then apparently, as far as the couple's conscious recollect tion is concerned, both the light and the sound abruptly disappeared and the car continued its 50 m.p.h. journey down the road. At this moment, feeling that somehow they had lost time, they checked their watches discovering that it was 12:55 a.m. Over an hour was missing.

These are some of the basic consciously remembered facts related by Michael during our first meeting. He was very curious to discover what might have caused the hour's missing time and, having heard of my previous case work using hypnotic regression to unlock amnesia in certain UFO cases, had come to request that we undertake whatever sessions might be necessary to achieve this result.

I explained that I would be agreeable, especially since the witness appeared to be extremely sincere, mature, and quite above average in intelligence. More than this, the fact that there were two witnesses made the case attractive from an investigator's viewpoint for a multiple witness case is capable, as we know, of yielding a depth of dimension which is not possible with a single observer, however percipient. I set as a condition for investigating the case and conducting the hypnosis sessions that I would not make any of the tapes of the sessions available for playback until the hypnosis work with both husband and wife was fully completed.

Unfortunately, as it turned out, I was not to be given the opportunity to view this case through the eyes and the experiences of two witnesses.

Following this initial interview I did not hear again from Michael for seven months while he considered whether or not he and his wife should go ahead with the hypnosis sessions. Finally, after over seven months had gone by, he came to see me again, declaring that during this time he had been undergoing a profound and inexplicable change in perspective, actually a struggle in which two forces seemed to be contending for dominance. The one was his conservative and orthodox conditioning, the other consisted of a series of very powerful impulses of quite unidentifiable origin which kept prompting him to set this rigidity aside.

"I have been going through a confusing and puzzling attitudinal change which seems to be coming from knowledge which I somehow suddenly have but have absolutely no knowledge of where I might have picked it up," Michael related following his long absence.

This change in attitude seems to have been centered about subject matter which Michael had always regarded, within his very conservative and quite rigid philosophical framework, as controversial and therefore highly suspect. The fact that this change in perspective stemmed from the time of his baffling encounter with the strange blue light and the subsequent loss of time experience, had finally persuaded Michael to try to discover whether there might be a correlation. When, however, during the investigation of the case he discovered that there might indeed be such a correlation, he apparently backed away, leaving an excellent case unable to be completed.

Returning to our narrative relating to the consciously remembered part of the case we find that the husband and wife were very confused by their encounter with the intense beam of blue light, the loud sound, and the resultant time loss. They tried to find some rational explanation or perhaps some other motorist who might have possibly seen something unusual, but to no avail. The couple proceeded on into the town of Longmont. They stopped at a gas station where the husband, Michael, was accustomed to getting a pack of cigarettes on each of the nights he would make the late commute from Denver where he taught art classes. Much to his surprise as he stepped away from the car he found he had no equilibrium and discovered that he was walking in semi-circles in a difficult attempt to get to the front door of the gas station. Unable to adequately correct this problem, to his embarrassment as he finally reached and opened the door, he proceeded to walk directly into the door jam! The attendant, Michael relates, regarded him with a strongly disapproving glance expressing more than a bit of suspicion that this late-night motorist was quite solidly intoxicated.

The following day Mary pointed out to her husband a strange mark on her lower abdomen in the shape of a rectangle with a white line around its perimeter. She later had a vivid dream of being in a field with her husband near some sort of strange craft and in the presence of an unusual entity, described as a man possessing strong charisma who communicated with them without speaking.

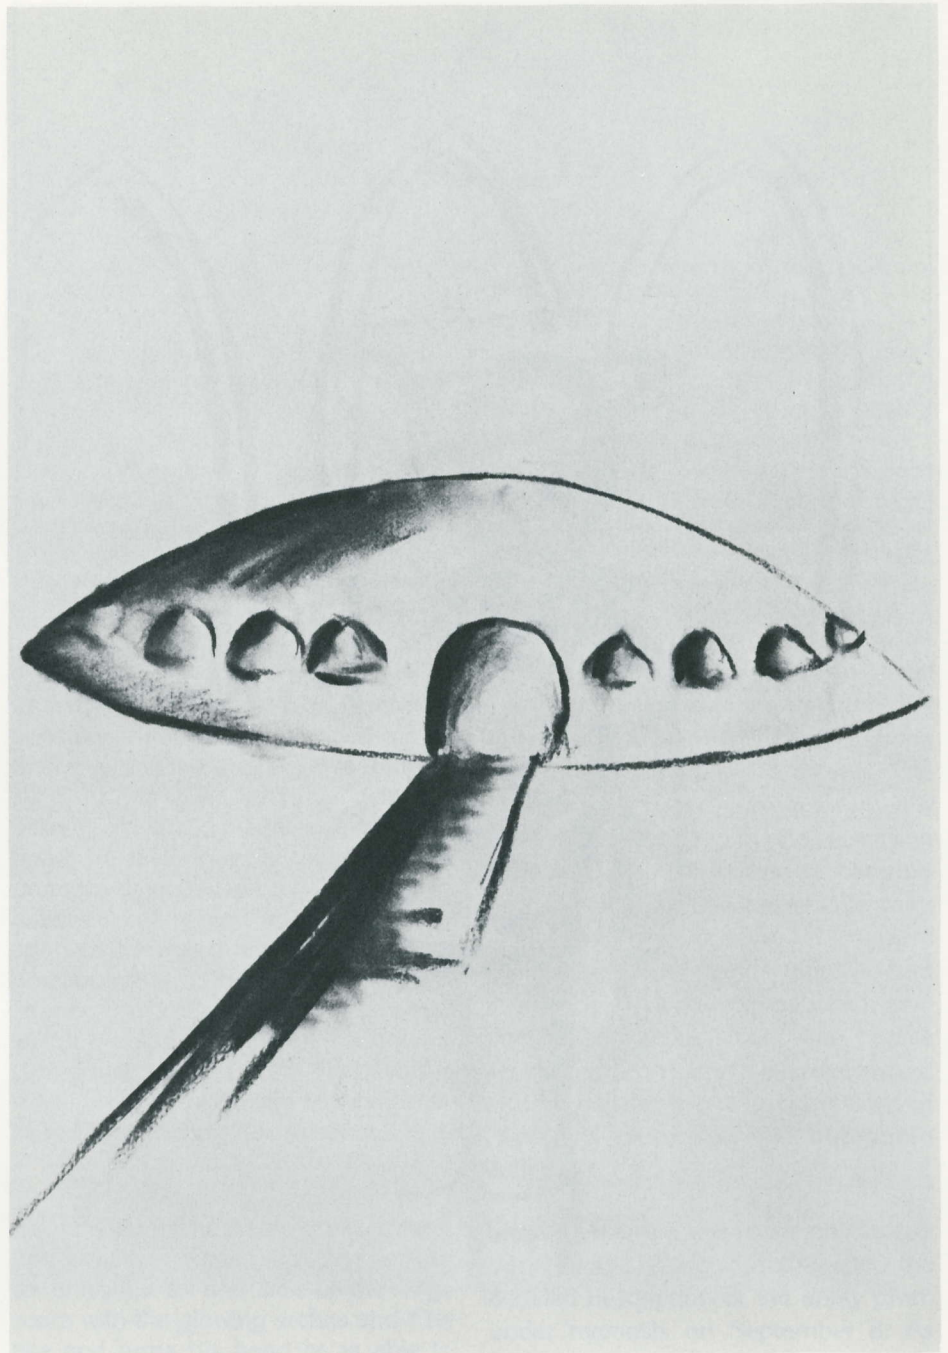

Mary did not know at the time of the experience that she was almost two months pregnant. She discovered this fact soon after, during a hospital confinement for an extremely serious case of streptococcal pneumonia, an illness which brought her to the brink of death. Since she became almost fatally ill very soon after the strange encounter with the blue light, she for some time formed an association of the one traumatic event with the other. This resulted in a fear of ever mentally returning to the blue light event and whatever it might imply. This fear was very difficult to overcome and proved to be one more impediment to the resolution of the case.

As a final note concerning this illness, in spite of its extreme severity Mary did not abort as was expected but continued to carry the child, although short of full term. The child was born prematurely at seven months. The infant, however, was not retarded or brain damaged as had been predicted because of the great likelihood of having suffered severe oxygen deprivation during the mother's struggle with streptococcal pneumonia. On the contrary, the child was born more developed than was expected and continues to be very healthy and mentally vital and alert, to the point of precociousness.

Regarding this child, we are making no claims that its course of development or present condition is related to the experiences of the mother with reference to the blue light and the subsequent events, the nature of which were brought forth during her husband's hypnosis sessions. The information is given here simply because it is part of this complex and puzzling story.

We may speculate as we wish concerning the motive behind this mental examination, given, of course, that we place credence, at least for the moment, upon the information given during these hypnosis sessions. What first comes to mind is the Freedom of Information Act release in January, 1979, of data by the Defense Department revealing visits during the autumn of 1975 by UFOs to our nuclear bomber bases and missile launch sites. It may be relevant to note that Michael was at one time in the military service in duty involving anti-ballistic missile defense systems set up by the United States.

Lights emanate from the large domed object. A doorway appears open with a long ramp extended, apparently made of light, or glowing as if so fashioned.

In the doorway stands "a strange looking person," as Michael relates, wearing shiny gold colored clothing of some unusual design. The head is described as "long...bald, with grey skin." The entity indicates to the couple that they are to proceed to him.

The Hypnosis Sessions:

I conducted a series of three deep hypnosis sessions with Michael. There have been no hypnosis sessions conducted to date with Mary. Since Michael is an excellent artist, the last session involved the drawing of four pictures during deep hypnosis. Linda Moulton Howe, the award winning film maker and chief of special projects for KMGH, Channel 7 TV, Denver, Colorado, was technical assistant during the hypnosis sessions. The tapes of the hypnosis sessions were not played back for the subject to hear during the course of the sessions. This was done so as to prevent earlier information from possibly influencing later sessions. And, under deep hypnosis there is no spontaneous recall.

Perhaps the single most interesting event brought forth by these hypnosis sessions aside from the value of the pictures produced, is the description of a mental examination where Michael, under hypnosis, states that he feels his memory bank has been entirely "drained away," examined, and eventually replaced intact, with the exception that something of significance has been added.

The Results of Hypnosis Sessions #1 and #2:

Under deep hypnosis, Michael relives the following experiences which are presented here in very brief detail, space considerations precluding of course the presentation of a full report.

With the blue light surrounding the car and in the presence of the very loud sound described earlier, the vehicle is lifted up and transported into the presence of a large object which has the shape of a dome. A heavy mist envelops the area as if both car and dome-shaped object are in the midst of a dense cloud. A strong and penetrating odor suffuses the immediate environment reminding Michael of the missile bases to which he was attached while in the service. He strongly dislikes the odor and does not conceal the fact. He exclaims that the odor has to do with electricity. His wife, Mary, is extremely frightened.

Lights emanate from the large domed object. A doorway appears open with a long ramp extended, apparently made of light, or glowing as if so fashioned.

In the doorway stands "a strange looking person," as Michael relates, wearing shiny gold colored clothing of some unusual design. The head is described as "long...bald, with grey skin." The entity indicates to the couple that they are to proceed to him.

They go inside the object, the odor remains, the walls glow, while the outer perimeter of the room displays a series of arches which radiate orange on their outside edges. For some reason the fear that they experienced while outside the object now leaves them. Michael suddenly realizes at this point, however, that Mary is gone, is no longer beside him; he becomes very angry, then belligerent, going after one of the entities, threatening to "get that bastard!"

He finds himself quickly restrained by silver bands which pin his arms. He is greatly alarmed and very disconsolate at losing his wife. Another entity appears near him. I ask Michael to relate to me the appearance of this being. The description given is identical to the picture, reproduced here, of the entity which Michael drew during the final hypnosis session which was conducted over three months later.

Michael feels that this entity is in tune with his mind, and exclaims "he knows everything I'm doing, I'm thinking...he knows everything...he's picking my mind...like he can read every thought."

Floating light and examination table sketched by Michael during the last hypnosis session.

In the room a table appears which at first seems to be made of a gaseous substance but which later seems to become solid. Michael finds himself lying on this table which has achieved solidity. A floating light moves overhead. He feels that his mind is being connected to the mind of one of the entities. He is naked and feels certain spots on his legs burning. (Michael has a serious skin problem, having several large melanomas on his legs which are suspected to be cancerous. Upon last contact with Michael the melanomas were greatly reduced both in size and in their discoloration).

He remains very concerned about his wife whom he hears upon at least one occasion screaming. She is with an entity far to one side of the large room with the glowing arches and if he tilts and turns his head he is able to see her. At the time that he does so he finds her standing with an entity and he exclaims, "She looks like a zombie...she's just standing there...blank...a blank face. No expression on her face."

"No nothing" he continues "...and naked, naked as a jaybird." "So am I," he adds, dejectedly.

Michael then describes in detail the shape and size of the hands of the humanoid entity, the extremely long fingers; he cannot see a thumb. The pictures which the subject eventually drew at the last deep hypnosis session show the type of hands he carefully now describes. They are, incidentally, very similar to the very long and unusually formed hands quite evident in Len Stringfield's photos which purport to be of the small alien bodies recovered from the alleged crashed saucer. Vide the reproduction of Michael's picture of the humanoid entity.

The drawing was made on November 10, 1981, two months after the detailed description of the entity given under hypnosis on September 8. As stated earlier, the hypnosis tapes were not played back for Michael to hear prior to his making of the drawings. And under the quality of the deep hypnosis to which he is subjected, he has, of course, a total lack of recall. Nonetheless, the drawings and the descriptions taken from the hypnosis transcripts match.

His legs continue with the burning sensation. He then experiences a rushing sound accompanied by the sensation that everything has been "pulled out" of his head.

He cries out that "My thoughts... everything in my mind is stripped."

"Stripped?" I inquire.

"It's just gone. I've got it but they've got it too."

"You've got it and they've got it too?" I again inquire?

"You're goddamn right! Got the whole thing...the whole damn thing," Michael proclaims. Then with a small futile laugh mumbles, "it's crazy, crazy!"

Then, "I'm sitting up now."

He eventually experiences a spinning sensation and what he describes as a terrible sound (quite possibly internal). At this time his memory flows back into him. With this sensation he states that not only has his memory been returned but that he feels a significant increment has been added.

"It's like he took out everything that was in me and it's like he put something else in...took out every thought I ever had. It seems like he's put it all back but he's put more there. It's like he's given me something. That's wild!"

He continues,

"Puts something in my life ...I don't know what it is... whatever it is, it's good. Gave me abilities." "Abilities," he repeats but adds in a helpless tone, "I don't know where Mary is!"

After a long pause, he exclaims,

Knowledge!, the man gave me something," Michael repeats indredulously, "took everything I had and examined it and gave it back and gave me something else. He was very nice."

Then he muses forlornly, "I really don't want anything ...I just want to get home...and I want my wife!"

The blue light then surrounds the car again, just as in the initial part of the experience; the heavy "whish" "whish" sound like a bull whip also reappears and the couple find themselves on the road once again. "But the rear end's up in the air!" Michael says with great disbelief. "Going 55 miles an hour and my rear end's up in the air!" The car slowly settles down fully upon the road. The blue light and the sound are now gone.

When it is apparent that the couple is proceeding down the road toward Longmont (Michael is still of course under deep hypnosis) I ask if when he was aboard the domed object, did he get any idea where it was from? He replies "No, I have no idea. They gave us both something, however (meaning he and Mary)...they gave me strength I didn't have...and they gave me some of their knowledge."

"Is that what they gave you?" I asked. "Yes, there's more to life ...more to the world, more dimensions...things coexisting... there are other dimensions, there are more dimensions...it all works together, everything co-exists. There's different dimensions we can't go into."

"Is this what you learned?" I inquired. "I guess so. Maybe that's where they're from...a different dimension. Maybe they're from here...just a different dimension. Maybe that's where we're going. I don't know."

Michael continues under questioning, "I have the power now to go into myself, I didn't have before, can quiet down, it's a strength I didn't have, it's not a physical strength, it's like energy ...it's developing more." "I don't want it to develop!" he suddenly adds. "you don't what?" I exclaimed, surprised at this last Hypnosis Session #3, November 10, 1981: (This sessions includes the drawing of four pictures).

The examination is over; Mary is brought to Michael. He finds his clothes in a heap by a control panel, and he is assured by what appears to be the chief entity that everything is alright, that they may leave the ship. Outside, Michael is aware of a pulsating, humming, noise and again perceives the very heavy mist which he reported earlier. He is amazed and alarmed as he tries to comprehend the apparent fact that both ship and car are suspended within the heavy mist.

He exclaims with great agitation, "Son of a bitch! I think the whole thing is suspended. I don't know...I can't tell...I think everything is suspended (laughs nervously) a 4,000 pound car!...I think we're suspended...maybe we're on the ground...I don't know. Sure as hell misty! It's misty...misty. I must be crazy! It's suspended. That damn car is up in the air! So are we. Everything's up in the air. Must be ...must be!"

don't want it to develop. I've got too many other things to worry about besides that."

Michael's final comments reveal the psychological conflicts building within him concerning this close encounter experience. This reaction, along with his previous strong skepticism regarding the reality of the UFO phenomenon, may help to explain his failure to continue with the additional drawing session which was planned, his failure to bring his wife for her regressive hypnosis session, and his subsequent retreat into anonymity, an abrupt disappearance leaving no telephone and no forwarding address.

Michael's final statements made during the last hypnosis session follow:

"What am I going to do with that? (meaning the knowledge and the newly found strength) I sure as hell don't want to be different. I don't want to be different, just me. Do my thing and let people leave me the hell alone! The responsibility that goes with something like that. I don't want any more responsibility. Got enough!"

I ask Michael to tell, if he could, what sort of responsibility he feels so compelled to abjure. He responds in a quieter, more subdued tone of voice, "Not specifically...just that you've got to give...got to give all I can give ...I've got to give more. Guess if I've got it, I'll give it," he adds with a note of resignation.

The last hypnosis and drawing session with Michael occurred on November 10, 1981. Our last contact via telephone was on February 16, 1982. He has since moved, giving no address or telephone. Because of this, hypnosis sessions were never able to be conducted with his wife, Mary, depriving this case of the recognition which its excellent potential might have indeed commanded. The tapes of the sessions have never been heard by the couple.

Michael's very considerable talent in art (he is a gifted artist) has given us perhaps the first portrait of a UFO entity, however unusual the conditions under which that portrait was produced. My regrets concerning this case are several, one being that more pictures were not evidently to be had. It was also my hope that future drawings would be done in color. In those which we see reproduced here the medium used is charcoal. It also goes without saying that the loss of Mary's invaluable input into this intriguing close encounter case is difficult to accept.

In conclusion, we might say that however motivated Michael might have been to discover what may have happened during the puzzling loss of an hour's time following his even more perplexing encounter with the strange beam of blue light, this desire could not evidently overcome his conservative mental set. This is well expressed in his statement, "I have been conditioned to regard UFO people as fringe people."

The dilemma which we spoke of earlier is not just that of the investigator who in this case invested a good deal of time and energy without being able to fully complete his work; it is ever so much more the dilemma of a witness who was torn between a desire to resolve a puzzling experience to which he was subjected and an apparent fear of discovering something which might alter his orthodox view of the world. How To Report UFOS:

Witnesses to a suspected UFO sighting should, if possible, do the following:

- 1) Locate and identify by names and addresses other witnesses to the sighting.
- 2) Photograph the object, the site, and any physical traces observed from several locations, including trees and buildings, using all film available, stabilized against movement during time exposures, preserve negatives for examination, record details of camera, lens and setting and film type.
- 3) As soon as possible, write down all details of the event, including time, duration, location, area sketch, orientation, weather and object details, such as color, sound, shape and approximate size.
- 4) Report the sighting promptly by calling our 24-hour number in Evanston, Illinois, (312) 491-6666, or write to CUFOS, P.O. Box 1402, Evanston, IL 60204.

English language entries must be accompanied by a full English translation to be eligible.

For additional information, contact Dr. Lawson or the Fund for UFO Research, P.O. Box 277, Mount Rainier, MD 20712.

How We Define UFOS:

A UFO is any anomalous aerial phenomena whose appearances and/or behaviours cannot be ascribed to conventional natural or man-made causes either by the original witnesses or by other technically trained analysts after thorough investigation using the best techniques and equipment currently available.

- NL — Nocturnal Light: a distant anomalous light seen in the night sky.
- DD — Daylight Disc: a distant object seen under daylight conditions, often disc-shaped.
- RV — Radar/Visual: UFOs detected visually and by Radar simultaneously. Good agreement between the two accounts is essential.
- CE I — Close Encounter of the First Kind: a UFO seen within 500 feet.
- CE II — Close Encounter of the Second Kind: a CE I which includes a verifiable change in the environment such as physical traces, physiological effects and electromagnetic interferences.
- CE III — Close Encounter of the Third Kind: a CE I or II including the report of associated creatures, humanoids or robots.
